EDITORIAL COMMENT

"School days are your best days." How often we have heard people out in the world make that statement, and have wondered why they thought so. The only conclusion that I can conceive is that besides "getting a thrill" out of the activities in which the school and pupils take part, is the friendships which are formed in school. "Friendship is the shadow of the evening which strengthens with the setting sun of life."—LaFontaine.

Friendship is one of the biggest gains in school life; it helps one to get along when he goes out into the world, because he can rely upon the aid of his friends in time of need.

"The stars shall fade away, the sun himself

Grow dim with age, and nature sink in years,

But friendships will live on and on."

In school, one has the greatest opportunities to build up strong friendships. Athletics form an active part of school life and are helpful in creating friendly terms between both the team men and their opponents. Generally, after a game in which every fellow has played fair, you can feel that a friend or friends have been won and you can count on being called such when that team is again played. This feeling of good comradeship is not only created among the pupils only, for the coaches make themselves felt as very friendly factors both in and out of school.

The making of friendships is not confined to the field of athletics only, but is active in the classroom also. Daily meetings with your classmates and teachers point out to you their good and bad qualities and soon bring you to a realization of the predominance of both, so that you desire certain people as friends upon whom you can count. School is made just as easy because you can feel that all are working together and not away from each other.

In less than a month, the class of '26 will be leaving the doors of Port Washington High School as students, yet will they not carry with them the friendships formed during these years of contact? The answer is,—they will, because they have been a body which has tried to work together. Friendships good and true have been the cause of that co-operation and may be considered as one of the chief attributes of that class.

When some of these pupils graduate, they will leave behind them others with whom they have been associated for many years. Will these friends lose track of one another as each goes his separate way? Again I say no,—because the friendships that have been built up among them by their long association together will not allow them to become strangers. Undoubtedly, there will be literal separation but with the present ease of communication, I am willing to wager that the friends in the class of '26 will not forget each other.

"Deposited upon the silent shore

Of memory, images and previous thoughts

That shall die and can not be destroyed."

The Senior Banquet

Tuesday, May 18, at seven o'clock—words such as these probably convey little meaning to any but the Seniors. To the Seniors, however, they are far more important, for seven o'clock on Tuesday, May 18th, found them gathered together at Bradley's for their last informal social meeting as a class. With them, were the members of the High School faculty and representatives of the Board of Education, Mrs. Enscoe and Mr. Kelland. Abie Raff, our Senior President, began the merry evening by extending to all present a hearty welcome, after which the "ring-famous" C. C. Gilliar was introduced in his new role of toastmaster. Concerning the food, let it suffice to say that few more delicious and appetizing dinners have been served. Afterward, tables were cleared and a rap sounded; it was the toastmaster introducing the after-dinner speeches. "Abe" could not refrain from telling some jokes from his large repertoire before Mr. Kelland, the first speaker of the evening, was introduced. To Mr. Kelland was assigned the task of breaking the ice, so to speak, between the students and their guests, and his speech was certainly effective.

A complete surprise was the presence of Mr. Costane, of the Saturday Evening Post, who, by his words, made the Seniors feel like writing a $1,000 story to complete their records. "Ally" Frankfort, our basketball Captain of last season, recited a poem—not the kind you hear in, well grammar school, but a masterpiece of school spirit and the basketball achievements.

Edith Nielsen absorbed all interest while speaking about her knowledge gained from her experience in dramatics in Port Washington High School. "Linky," as baseball Captain, "puffed" the baseball team and coach.

While speaking of baseball, we must not forget the rousing speech of Audrey Clock. We all hope that the girls' team, when fully organized, will compete with the boys' team in carrying off the honors. Jimmy Jenkins is always able to talk on his favorite subject—track, but we must not exclude "Dinty," our all round manager. "Ranny" Bruce could never be forgotten, for school spirit is only one of his many attributes and his speech on that subject was intensely interesting. After these various speeches interspersed with "colorful" jokes, Mr. Merrill was introduced. He told the Seniors how to win success and then gave his "few announcements," namely, that John Moore and Edith Baikie were to be Valedictorian and Salutatorian respectively. Mr. Schreiber ended the program with a few remarks about the Senior Class, telling therewith some very amusing jokes. Following this, "Abe" Gilliar pronounced the evening a success, due to the untiring efforts of the committee in charge and a hearty cheer was raised for the committee. The speeches being over and the orchestra's turning up meant that the dancing was to begin.

Thus passed one of the most important of Senior Class events and a thoroughly enjoyable evening. May the next class enjoy such a celebration.

Port Wins Interscholastic Speaking Contest

Last Friday, May 21, a large number of our Port people traveled to Glen Cove for the annual Speaking Contest in which Edith Baikie and Walter Persson were to participate. We were more than anxious to win this year for if Port won it would mean that the cup would be our permanent possession. We were second on the programme and thoroughly enjoyed our position. Most of the speeches were given well and were very enjoyable. After the last speaker had concluded, we felt a tiny ray of hope that the decision would be in our favor for we were quite agreed that our team was the best. However, we dared not trust ourselves to express our hopes for many times the spectators disagree with the judges. While the judges, Robert K. Toaz, Floyd B. Watson and Arthur T. Jolley, were in session, the schools engaged in cheering. "Jimmy" Jenkins was a very capable leader and we all responded. At last one of the judges appeared on the platform and everybody became silent and expectant. The judge declared that he always made it a custom to be as brief as possible in giving the decision and that the judges had decided in favor of Team 2. For only a second were we still and then we almost "screamed in wild joy" and "Jimmy" again led us in a cheer. We wish to extend our most sincere congratulations to Edith and Walter, and to their coach, Miss Gaylord.

Future Faculty

We learn with regret that several members of the faculty will not be with us next year. Miss Schoonmaker will spend the year in further college study. Mr. Dimmick, Mr. Hill, and Mr. Lyons have decided that they must transfer their activities to the business world. We will be sorry to lose these teachers but wish them success in their new fields.

There are to be a number of changes and additions to the High School faculty next year. The list is now complete and we here announce the new and complete list of high school instructors:

Exchange News

The Port Weekly has received a new exchange this week. This time it is from Bridgeport High School, Bridgeport, Connecticut. Their paper, the Criterion, is an excellent one. It received Third Honor Rating in the Central Interscholastic Press Association All-American Newspaper Contest which was conducted at the University of Wisconsin. We also received an exchange from the Bronxville High School. We are sure that these two are excellent papers.

In The Adventurer, from Stony Brook, Long Island, we find this remark about our weekly: "As compact a little paper as we have ever seen, and very newsy, too."

Roslyn Succumbs to Port in Ragged Exhibition, 20-4

In a very messy ball game the weak Roslyn nine bowed to our boys at Roslyn last Tuesday by a score of 20-4. Both sides gave rare interpretations of what real bush league ball looks like. There was nothing commendable in the playing of either team. Both sides were guilty of numerous and glaring misplays. Even Charlie Evanosky seemed to be affected by the lethargy which for some unaccountable reason took possession of our team. If our playing was shabby, Roslyn's playing was even more so. To the onlooker it seemed that the game was a battle to decide which group was worse. We sincerely hope that there will be no more of such actions on the part of Port. Championship hopes will be rudely shattered if anything similar happens against a stronger team.

Port knocked the Roslyn pitcher off the hill in the first stanza after scoring six runs and when Farrington came to the rescue they managed to score quite regularly for the remainder of the game. However these scores were not entirely Mr. Farrington's fault since the support which he received was atrocious. In our opinion the less said about the game the better. Perhaps the heat was to blame, but we are going to meet teams much stronger than Roslyn and the team must certainly come up if the North Shore cup is to be annexed again this year.

Port Wins Seventh Straight, Defeating Sea Cliff, 17-2

After a ragged start the Port nine emerged victor over Sea Cliff by a score of 17-2 at Port last Friday afternoon. The visitors made two runs in the first inning and for a time things looked dangerous for our carefully nursed winning streak of six games. However, things tightened up quickly and for the remainder of the game the customers were treated to a few examples of real pitching. In the second inning, the first batter got a hit and the anvil chorus on the visitor's bench got "going strong." Charlie dispassionately fanned three men and sat down, whereupon the anvil chorus failed to take an encore. Linkfield then assumed the labor on the hill and for four innings was quite invulnerable. He fanned eleven men during that time. One hit was made but it caused no damage.

For the past few games we have noticed that the boys are beginning to get careless. Poor competition has made them too confident. If they expect to win championships they will have to play ball and stop the clowning that has been going on. Also, some of them are falling down in their studies and we don't want that to happen. The team has the ability to win if it will play ball as it should be played. For the good of the team we hope that they will get down to business immediately.
